Quotes: “Because if you no longer pay attention to something, it may just disappear. Your soul and your conscience, your softness and your gratitude, your amazement and your feeling of awe all need an ‘infrastructure’ within you, a familiar path. If you don’t maintain it, you may just lose your way to your soul. What helps you to ensure that this road remains recognisable and passable? The way to your soul: that is a feeling for which it can be difficult to find the right words. But if you feel it, you can start looking for how you can share it. Also with children and young people.”
