

You matter

Quote

"It can sometimes be quite tempting to be indifferent. There is so much that happens around us over which we appear to have little influence. You might then shrug your shoulders and think: What difference can I make? However, I cannot really reconcile this with the deep realisation that I am part of an infinitely large whole, in which I can, and dare to, stand in life with confidence. Stand for what I say, do and, sometimes, not do." ... "All of us have originated from the same creative force, we are from and of the same origin."

Explanation of the choice:

You matter, and I matter. With which colors from my palette of talents and possibilities do I paint my life? That's why I will continue to choose for love that sets me in motion to continue to do more than the ordinary.
